Cara Soror,

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law.

When I was writing that letter about prophecy, I was hot and bothered all the time by my faithful sentinel, the well-greaved Hoplite that stands at the postern of my consciousness, ready to challenge every thought - and woe to the intruder who cannot give the countersign! This time the dear old ruffian thought the matter serious enough to report Higher Up. "Is it put plainly enough, emphatically enough, incontrovertibly enough" was the gist of his communication "that the first and most irretrievable trick of the enemy is to dupe you into passing Captain Coincidence as 'Friend', when he is naturally the most formidable of all your foes when it comes to a question of proof?"

Quite right, Sergeant-Major! But it is not only about prophecy, but about all sorts of things, in particular, of course, the identification of angels and similar problems.

Well, we have captured quite a few lads of the company of Captain Coincidence; let us have them up for examination and learn what we can about their weapons and other warlike matters!

I take our first prisoner from "Magick": "The most famous novel of Fielding is called "Tom Jones". It happened that FRATER PERDURABO was staying in an hotel in London. He telephoned a friend named Feilding at the latter's house, and was answered by Mr. Feilding's secretary, who said that his employer had left the house a few minutes previously, and could

His Enemy

James Paulson

~~Emmrich~~ Gatz, an ambitious but humble statesman, consults

^{Robert Patterson}
Dr. Hans Krutger a new specialist.

He has been worried by an unknown ~~for~~ enemy. He half fears, he is suffering from persecutor-mania. The doctor reassures him: that morning he has received an anonymous letter warning him of G's visit, denouncing him as a rogue &c.

Posted previous night. G "I didn't think of coming here till this morning!"

Cross-questioned on this.

K prescribes sedative-tonic.

G "When shall I call again?"

K "afraid we just accepted appt State Inspektorship, Pnorn - so give up private practice."
