Carl Frater

The Chancellor of AA is glad to receive your letter of the 28 ultimo. The only question which requires to be answered is with regard to the place & the circle.
In a place like Vane, it ought to be possible to do very good work out of doors during the Summer.

The instructions in Liberal 175 should settle your difficulties on most of these points. The instructions in this book can easily be translated into terms of Higher Practice.

Editors

The Divine Life

Dear Madam,

In the article in your excellent Magazine "The Divine Life", "I show you a Better Way", you give a certain amount of unfavourable criticism to a book of mine called Book 4.

You say that the student is not at any time in a state of mind for meditation during the practice of keeping his body still.

Certainly he is not. The point is that he never will be until he has perfected the practice, conquered his body, & reached the state described at the end of the chapter. ✓

You further remark that in all these methods, not a word is said about devotion. This is again true, because they are not Devotional methods.

Some people are quite incapable of devotion, which seems to them ridiculous.

Others are equally incapable of scientific thought. These 2 cannot be treated alike.

In other parts of my teaching will be found many pages of a devotional character.

I am sending you a typed copy of the instruction pertaining to this matter, which you are quite at liberty to print if you will do so without alteration. This however, is only preliminary.

Dear Austin Hamlin
I am afraid you will never acquire literary sense. My letter was not sincere. It was merely a sample of the kind of letter you lay yourself open to by such conduct as I have had to deplore. I thought I made it clearly understood that I could not work on the magazine until paid for it. I have tried magazines to suit you, but you always want me to — them again you keep on doing this, so that if I were to consent, I might have to work for the rest of my life on this one meagre article. However, on receipt of the £20 I will endeavour to remove any spark of liveliness or wit that may be ~~lost~~ lurking in the article, & in every other way try & lower it to the standard of the "English Review". But, if in the course of an honest day's work, I do my best in this matter, if you then want me to put it into

poets

or Donalshire ✓

or in the style of

Tolson or Bookhollops

I shall require a refresher. By this means, I hope we shall keep as much goodwill in business as we have worked out in golf, with regard to which I should like to make a few further remarks. I was under the impression that we were to play 3 days, 36 holes a day, on 3 courses, & that this was to constitute a single match, payment to be made on the winning of that match. But on the fateful day at Mitcham. You wanted to do an entirely different set of things. You wanted 18 holes to count as 36, as we might be a little late for the train, proposed 16 would be as good as 18, & "didn't it look like rain?" "Let us play 14?" how I was giving you odds considerably in excess of $3/4$, the difference between our handicaps, & under such circumstances I think you

American Law
ought to have been particularly the same, as one of 108 holes. It is quite possible for me to catch Harry Vardon (on an off-day) + beat him for a stroke in the course of a final round, but it is a million to one against me doing so in 6 rounds. Well then, with regard to the {instance} of the 12th Green when you said "I never claim a hole on opponent - when he loses the hole in this manner - to offer to give it up, so that I may have the exquisite pleasure of saying "Why, of course not, dear old

Feb 12

In reference to our letter of Feb. 12. 1913, 1913

to which we have not had an answer:

We cannot keep this parcel & must ask you to let us know your decision at once, as this offer can never be repeated. It has meant the labour of months to get together so complete a set of Books.

We are now able to supply the ^{New Year's} which we have obtained with Card, the utmost difficulty, as it was sent out more than 10 years ago to persons whose names & addresses are now lost.

Similar remarks apply to many of the {smaller} items. They are {similar} particularly difficult to obtain through being issued in pamphlet form, & distributed among careless people, so that it is improbable that many copies will ever come to the market, at no matter what price.
