My dear Blanche Conn,

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

I assume that the 3333 francs received a few days ago comes from you. It pulled us through. For all that I have to enclose a copy of a letter I am writing to Leah's sister (Mrs. Bliss, 156 East 49 Street? - last address known) I haven't the slightest idea what our circumstances are and I have been careful not to discuss the matter with Leah. I assure her that somehow or other I will keep her from going under. Her courage is positively infernal. She is intensely happy in her love and her work - it is the actual physical strain which has begun to break her down. I have myself been very ill all the year, feally from this cause. I have now got a man, in fact more than one, to devote themselves to straightening out our affairs and all that is necessary is to arrange for Leah to be nursed, fed up etc., till her health comes back and the money comes in, when we shall be able to pay back the people who have helped us through. Our assets are of course very huge indeed. I should be worth not far short of a million dollars at this moment if it were not for the ghastly persecution which the envious have kept up so long.

If you can spare any more, please cable it as before to Norman Kudd, Crédit Lyonnais, Tunis.

Love is the law, love under will,

P.S. At this moment of writing it is clear from recent events that Mussolini is coming smash and a big one. I have been expecting it of course for a year. His action in expelling me from Italy was typical of the arbitrary and unjust tyranny of the man. The point is that his fall may mean a Number One size revolution and I might at any moment need funds to get Sister Cypris and the children out of the murder zone.

Dear Alice,

Thanks for yr. letter. I have to dictate this reply being all in winter. I have changed so. I have just finished a tremendous piece of work and am feeling the reactions but it has been a huge success.

It is certainly rather back about my movements. I expect to come to P within the next week or two. I suppose I shall just miss you.

By the way, what do you do with your house when you are away? Do you shut it up or keep it going at low pressure of the latter, and you'd like to lend it to me when you are away. I can promise you to fix up something really amazing by the time you return. Please cable me if you will.

In any case I will write to you in Nov. I shall probably be somewhere near Rio for the winter.

My dear friends,

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

I have been in great trouble and very ill, so also has Mlle. Squelette. She will be coming to Paris in a few days. Please find her a nice room at the back of the house. I hope to come myself a little later. Please keep any letters for either of us until we arrive.

I have not forgotten that I owe you 2000 francs or whatever it is. My novel has been a tremendous success and I shall be able to pay you as soon as my royalties begin to come in. I meant to do so in the spring but the tyrannical outrage which I suffered at the hands of Russell stripped me of every spare sou so that I have been in desperate need of money ever since. I am sure you will understand and sympathise. My troubles are principally due to my loyal and passionate love of France and the principles political and ethical of your great republic.

I feel sure however that I shall be able to pay you in full within a month of my reaching Paris at the latest. One great difficulty has been the delay caused by my being so far away from the centre of any business.

I hope to hear that you are both in the best of health and prospering in every way. My kindest regards also to your nephew and niece. Both Lea and I are looking forward eagerly to seeing you again.

Love is the law, love under will,

P.S. I will wire date of arrival as soon as I know it so as to give you time to get the room ready. I prefer the first or second floor at the back but I would rather have a quite small room than one at the front; the autobus prevents me from sleeping.

dear's m. m.

My dear Alma,

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the Law.

You remember that I wrote you about a year ago that Leah was in great danger. I have done all I can in the most difficult circumstances and I am glad to say that the threatened consumption has been averted, for the time being, at least.

But still she droops. She has no strength. She is thinner than ever. The Doctor here - a very sound man - says her best chance is to rest and feed up.

The trouble is chiefly lack of money. The expulsion from Italy trebled our expenses and we have practically no funds.

My novel has been a huge success in America and when the royalties come in I shall be quite well off again. But if Leah were to die first, it wouldn't be much good to me, would it?

You have yourself suffered two great losses recently -- you will understand how I feel.

I want you to raise as much cash as you can -- at least 500 is needed at once to avert utter smash (we have been short of food all summer - and Lea needs above all building up and free freedom from the constant strain of anxiety.)

It should be given to a bank in New York to be credited to the credit of Professor Norman Mudd, Crédit Lyonnais, Tunis. I am sure that if you show this letter to Mummy, Blanche Conn, Elsie Sloan (of whom Leah has spoken a great deal) Hammond and other relatives and friends, the 500 can be made up. There should be a second 500 before Xmas; by that time I hope to begin to get my royalties and so to pay back this money, a bit at a time, of not all at once.

But I also want you to come personally to live with Leah. She is in absolute need of a sister's love and care. I want to be away from her till she is much stronger. Then I am with her, she tires herself out "taking care of me" - I can't stop her. (It is also essential to take Hansi from Geraiah and have him educated. He is splendid but needs such supervision and teaching, and surroundings of a new kind.)

I beg you most earnestly to do this without wasting a minute. I am distressed beyond anything I can say to see Leah fading away slowly - so sweet, patient, bright, loving; yet so weak that she can hardly get up to go out for a meal; and to feel so powerless to save her. With fresh air, good food, your tender care added to mine, rest of body and mind, she will get well and strong in a few months. (Her stay in Cefalù in July and August did wonders; but in this last month she has grown rapidly worse.) I had hoped to send her away, first to Cefalù, and thence on to France but have found it impossible. I hope you will come to Europe as soon as possible.

Love is the law, love under will.

P.S. I would give my life to save Leah - so would you I hope and believe - if anything I could do would help out about the money (e.g. my sending you an order to my publishers to repay you out of my royalties when they fall due - I enclose this for you to fill in and send to them if you wish; if not please destroy it -) Even if I did not love her as I do, I should know her for the sweetest woman alive, and give my all to save her - for the sake of the world itself of which she is the dearest treasure and the loveliest ornament.

I answer your seriation. Everything all most comfortable. Alotrael better daily; needs nothing but undisturbed loafing for at least 3 months. Thanks for notes on Comment - most admirable and helpful. III-39 "quickly" = in a lively manner. About S.W. - Alotrael can and is probably meant to assist as Cuarda did. "The Bride" is definitely Cuarda. See II-37. The great miss was Cuarda's toying etc. On our return to England her family laughed her out of continuing my programme. My idea of the S.W. is much like yours. Aimée Gouraud, or much better, Eva Tanguay, or even, at a pinch, Roddie Minor, might fill the bill, but I expect some one much younger. She should be my concubine for form's sake but bust up society on her own, acting as Binah to my Chokmeki. I have always doubted whether Alotrael could do this job and she did fail in one Supreme Odeal. Hence, no doubt, the present necessities. She has the qualities however of S.W. but no opportunity. We do not want a vulgar adulteress like Sady Abby or even a selfish stupid debauchee like Aimée Gouraud. Eva Tanguay is the ideal if she were 10 years younger. My feeling is that the Riel Man should come first and pour his gold. We need practically unlimited supplies - no pitiful $20,000.

"Abstraction" in Ms. A and is doubly underlined. My idea was a portmanteau "abstraction, obstruction" i.e. overcome of position of Museum Authorities and take away the St. John. I think "heart" does mean Tiphareth.

reindeered proof against the frightful danger

Vatican) Read Browning's "A Soul's Tragedy" again. I don't want Ogilby to know a 25th. leader of revolt.

C.1 You recur to secrecy. Do please give your authority.

You are wrong about my compassion.
You have yourself accused me of hacking through moral hedges etc.

Rest assured in any case that any official act of mine will be Thelamatic.

I have always been secret in such matters, as are dealt with in I-10, 50.

(I doubt whether the word "secret" used in AK in its vulgar sense. I assimilate it to ideas in secrection.)

(Note II-54. It was foreseen that I should need the long painful initiation with which you reproach me.)

D. I entirely agree. I wrote nearly 40 words in 3 hrs. 25 min. I have avoided reading the ms. I consider it vital repeat the work for Chaps. II & III on the appointed days. There are I think, 3 or words only of more than 2 syllables - Multitudes, energy, fulfillment, another each occurs once only.

As already stated I agree entirely with your final remarks. Do impress your view of the whole situation on N.S.F. He is almost certainly waiting for a lightning flash of this kind. I impress upon him also that I do not urge him in any way to resume cooperation; but that if at any time I should discover that I need him I shall summon him authoritatively, and wait to him if he refuses to obey. At the same time if in his judgment the time has come for him to volunteer, I shall be glad to see him and hear his proposals for establishing the Acorn.)

E. I have long since done this. You should understand that the sensitive part side of me is my intelligence department.

F. I admit the Freudian evasions though not specially in III-10, 11. But I analyzed them and if any such remain in the text of the Commentary it is because I wished to conceal my views from the profane. Compare my statement in Pt. IV Pt. III about sacrificing 150 male children per annum.

You cannot have it both ways - reproaching me for tattling and for silence.

G. My views should already be clear from various remarks above.

I feel quite sure that I shall be in perfect shape by the Solstice, provided my retirement is undisturbed.

Mrs. Marion Clark 1 West 85th St. New York City - Enclose ^{as} summons for her. Your answering letter should make it clear that a real thing can endure hardship and think it a joke. Her enemy has been the bourgeois tradition that as long as you dress for dinner, and the Presbyterian minister smiles when you pass, you are a great Adept. But her nature is free royal; and she can accomplish a tremendous work for the Law provided she has the contemptuous courage required to face the bourgeois. You can tell her that I was a mistake in not keeping my power secret and so avoiding abuse etc.; but I did this deliberately in order to familiarize myself with the conditions of the profane, as Peter the Great worked in a ship builder's yard in order to fit himself to be the great Tsar.

I think that Aimée Gouraud (after all may quite well understand your program. She has bucked the bourgeois for years and glorified in her "bad reputation". But she should not submit to this. She should go all out to make the dirty dogs feel what dirty dogs they are. Furthermore, she must really understand that the hangers-on who haunt her in the hope of swindling her now or later in one way or another are not free high-minded gentlemen but bourgeois with even the poor piffling virtues of the bourgeois. Let her learn to associate with people her own kind and use all her resources to put the kings on their thrones.

Do not shrink the fact that from my point of view you are a fine freak of nature.

From the standpoint of stirps you are pure cansille (I say this without in the least forgetting Hanks in Salambô, of whom you remind me strongly) in which a very extraordinary personality and a quite first-class intellect have got entangled. Many of your social attitudes are due to a complex set up by this conflict.

Do not mistake me about cansille. If you had a ducal pedigree from the birth of chivalry it would be the same. Your shape and clumsiness are ochlotie. Your noble qualities resent being tied up with the ungainly instrument. I understand you very well in this matter. You are the alter-ego of my Klopis incarnation. We are all liable to similar accidents.)

I break off because my meditations on your letter produced a strong impression that Abstrael who got last night spontaneously a lunar vision of probably great importance should to-night make a direct attempt to get into immediate personal communication with the Secret Chief. (Note that last night was the first vision of any value or interest whatever that she has hitherto obtained.)

I think there should be some classification of readers, e.

reports of divorce cases and the like are facts and of profitable study to lawyers, (if I leave any alive, which I doubt) but merely distract and degenerate the public at large, poisoning and corrupting their minds which might attain great things if properly nourished.

Of course the many shall have no power - they never have had, as Otto Kahn once told me.

My idea of freedom is roughly this: to remove all restriction from all men.

I consider newspapers a restriction. The growth of children being stunted by giving I do not allow them to drink it, helping their Will by my intelligence. "The people" must be treated as ignorant children. At the same time each one is a star and has the right to assume kingly power demonstrating his fitness for it by undergoing the ordeals.

Your section F - go right ahead. I really cannot see why you should have hesitated to be wholly frank with me. Your first duty is to interpret my will as rendered intelligible by the S.W. in intellectually comprehensible language.

G. I do not agree that the Hag should be dropped. You yourself insisted that its publication was my magical Weapon and we all nearly killed ourselves getting out the first draft. The except-

I don't understand my summoning you to Tunis cutting short your criticism. My only reason for wanting you was that you might continue it in the fullest way.

The truth of the whole business is that you were totally unfit to work with me. You had to be initiated. Hence Absothel's stunt of pretending to be in love with you etc. All means were tried to bewilder and baffle you to befool you and shape your loyalty. It was a pretty near thing. You seem now morally prepared to explore your intellectual and philosophical weakness and incompetence. (Surti) Your mind is childishly fickle, capricious, and pitifully dependent. You are a slave to the false logic which persuaded you that its limitations are laws. Your thought is a reed shaken by the wind, the wind of a frog's fart. You mistake your lack of simplicity for organic development. You call your dead leaf, blown hither and thither by Equinoxed gales, freedom of movement and sensitiveness to truth. You have, as Eddie says, perhaps the finest intellect now incarnate, and you are for that reason a world's champion footer.
Your treatment of the text of the Book of the Law is extremely significant of your intellectual incoherence and inadequacy. Like a Plymouth Brother your criticism in and out you quote Verse A without reference to the apparent contradiction of verse B and visa versa, whereas neither A nor B is intelligible without reference to the

C. which reconciles them.

A notable symptom of your ^{intellectual} atony, if not atrophy, complicated by moral dementia and spiritual hysteria, is your inability to simplify your mind, so as to think and act consistently and firmly. These letters themselves contain innumerable examples of incompatible ideas. You appear not to have the art of summing up a situation and eliminating all the rough working as soon as the decision is made.
Having decided on a policy one must refuse to serve up the old arguments as hash and reconsider the problem ab ovo. E.g. we decided about the Haq, vindication etc., the entire programme of A.I. in Oxford, and you now suggest dropping everything on the ground of some obscure scholastic-sewerage about AL.

How do learn this once and for all.
Set us assume that our plans for A.I. were one mass of muddled mooncalfery - how the less it should be carried out with demonic ^{determination} determination and its bitter lesson learnt. But he who hesitates is lost. No series of stupidities is as fatal as the slightest oscillation. I don't know whether this is in AL or not and I don't care - it is absolute Magic the very first principle of the "work of the wand". True, I may (willing to begin a new Sennarais) find myself bugging the left nostril of an ant-eater with claps, paws, soft shankers, and ulcerating granuloma of the pudenda. But the discovery should not diminish my erection or inhibit my ejaculation.

Do please get this into your ^{rem} ~~power~~ Carry things out right or wrong once you have started them without least result. The habit of pushing through error to its climax and disaster tires Tychei who says finally "There seems to be no fun in trying to irritate this obstinate ass by punishing his mistakes. I will amuse myself by crowning his most colossal blunder with some irrational success".

You seem to see this yourself when you admit having been inhibited from obviously proper action by worrying "have I any right - suppose I am wrong etc."

At this moment I command you to "drop your heaviness and get on simply with the appointed programme."

You will at the same time continue your criticism in the fullest and most uncompromising manner.

You are there to guide my Will but also to execute it per A.I. and you must not muddle the two functions. ^{id est} you are absolutely commanded to criticize me before I announce my Will and after the execution of that Will, but during the process of execution you are absolutely forbidden to make a destructive criticism.

e.g. I want to shave. You tell me that a razor is better than a sharp flint. Right. I say, however, 'I will shave with this flint'. Your business is to see that I get shaved with that flint as well as possible and to point out afterwards that ^{despite} all efforts I am ill-shaved and scratched but during shaving you are not to contemplate my error and make things worse.

Of course I have never forgiven you about that letter which you destroyed. That did not insure its contents being kept secret. You might have been compelled to reveal them under torture. The only possible course of action was to have blown your brains out on the spot. Though I course only after having killed off all the clairvoyants and pealed letter readers who might possibly have got an inkling of its nature.

The above illustrates your exaggerated way of dealing with affairs. It is indicative of intellectual or nervous instability. If I write 'keep secret the matter' I mean no more than use ordinary precautions not to let it be bruited abroad. I should have been careful to say 'destroy the letter' if I had thought such a course advisable. Nothing is more irritating to me than to have to witness such violations of common sense. It is no excuse whatever to confront me with my instructions and prove that they have been literally obeyed. I may not be able to punish you for disobedience but I attach a penalty even more severe to making an ass of myself.

To insist on my defining my terms is Simian violence amounting to lese-majesty. I have absolutely no patience with pedantry of the rationalistic sort. Clodd was bad enough but when that Clodd by dint of being pissed upon dissolves in Mudd, good-nights!
