All Ming Wen are monosyllabic; each has one vowel, or diphthong, sound (JANG) - slang chirk jaw ho - from 1 to 19. Tail GANG (consonants) make Limbs (THI) of jang tung. Chirk yow ho shee peen. A Rime is an Assonance or an Alliteration simply. TSING YON (pure rimes) are exceptional; usually jang is jeet with gang, either at head (SHAO) or tail (MAY) or both, even if gang be only an Aspirate or a Sibilant (as in 6). MAK & PAK are Shao Yon if reversed; as they stand they are May Yon. Most of joy gang are obvious (TIH). Any shik has but one pronunciation. SH & ZH are hard & soft, neh ZH is as "s" in measure. Ju, DH & TH, as in this & thing. G is always as in gate & j as jay.

In Poetry (XEE) a single line (YAO) is a Verse; a pattern of yao is a Stanza (TSANG), in which tzu yao, usually with same gong ho, must have either shao, may, or internal (NAI) yon. Tzu yao may or may not be consecutive. Rhythm, meter & tawng zheng will be discussed later & the subject matter. Just as Sung Lay is mastered before undertaking Zao Wen, ju xee tan fat booy sophistications like acrostics & palindromes. At the start Ming Wen Xee is easier than American poetry - however there are indeed depths in form (HING) - shik chien:-

SAY WAM CHIH PING SUP

LUP TIH PUNG CHOK KUP. This is leet by

FON CHEEK, a sort of Ming Wen Notarion, to:

SAM CHING SUP TUNG CHUP, neh "The altitudes of a triangle concur at its orthocenter".

Joy Shu (YON FER) shee Ming Wen Dayn Sup Yot - chun look pai gow sup ye wen to date, including the sixty-four hexagrams. These mun are the most appropriate that can be jak & have stood the bee of do do centuries. They are never to be taken in a pejorative sense - nor should wishful thinking prejudice one toward a euphemistic attitude - the anatomical ai is much more useful. There is always an explanation which satisfies & while writing Book Chameleon (ken for look yao kih fan & chien) GENESTHAI had this in mind & everything in the experience of MAW since then is in perfect harmony with this interpretation!
